

Rhone Street

Residential Treatment Home

Rhone Street is a five-bed residential treatment program that aims to provide a stable home environment for people who are transitioning to more independent living.

Residents admitted into this treatment home will be assisted with household responsibilities and other life skill areas related to reintegration into the community. Our multidisciplinary team includes a psychiatric prescriber, a team lead of rehabilitation services, recovery specialists, and peer support specialists.

Services are designed using Telecare's Recovery-Centered Clinical System (RCCS). This system emphasizes choice-making skills, harm-reduction techniques, and strives to awaken the hopes and dreams of the individual. The RCCS emphasizes "no force first" practices. Staff work with individuals within their cultural dynamic in building independence and self-responsibility in order to foster their recovery and successfully transition back to lower levels of care.

What to Expect

Treatment and support services are individualized and guided by the resident's hopes and dreams. Our service range is comprehensive, culturally competent, and flexible.

Our culture is based on recovery. We believe in respect and non-judgment, and we celebrate individual uniqueness. We care about the interpersonal relationships we develop so we can foster a supportive program setting.

Our staff is passionate, resourceful, and motivated. They are partners in recovery.

Our goal is to be a place that helps individuals thrive, despite any challenges they might face along the way. We want residents to be the leader of their recovery journey, and to create the life they want for themselves.

"The goal of recovery is not to become normal. The goal is to embrace the human vocation of becoming more deeply, more fully human."

Becoming a Resident

The Oregon State Hospital will supply priority referrals for transitioning individuals or those on the waitlist for acute care psychiatric hospitals. The length of stay is as long as needed.

Admission Criteria

- Adults ages 18 and older who qualify for Oregon Health Authority's (OHA) civil commitment and who meet the requirements for residential treatment or supported community residential placement.
- Individuals with mental illness who require higher levels of care, such as state hospitals and secure residential treatment facilities.
- Choice model and community mental health program

Termination of residency may occur under these circumstances:

- The individual is ready to transition to a lower level of care.
- The resident no longer needs or desires services provided by the program and wants to move to an alternative setting.
- A licensed medical professional assesses the individual to determine the need for continuous nursing care, extended hospitalization, or services the facility does not provide.
- The individual is continuously disruptive or poses a threat to themselves or others.

Our Story

Rhone Street was developed to fill a need in Northern Oregon for recovery-based residential care that would specifically target individuals transitioning to independent living who are not ready to be independent, but who do not need a locked setting.

The goal of the program is to reduce hospitalizations, increase the number of individuals with serious mental illness (SMI) in independent living, and to increase the overall quality of life for individuals with SMI in Northern Oregon.

This program is funded by Medicaid.
